Course Overview

This course is designed to give you a dynamic introduction to the field of sociology, with special attention paid to issues, ideas, and facets of American culture and society. It focuses in part on sociological research and writing done at Johns Hopkins to highlight the new knowledge produced by JHU sociologists. If you and we do our jobs correctly, you’ll walk away with an appreciation of the ideas and methods of sociological inquiry, an understanding of how sociological knowledge is developed, and a sense of where the field is today.

This course has four broad goals:

1. To introduce sociology and its ideas. You should have a sense of the kinds of issues with which sociology grapples, the tools it brings, and the ideas upon which it is built.

2. To survey several fields of contemporary sociology. Where is sociology going today? What do sociologists do?
3. To encourage critical approaches to social claims. Claims about the nature of society are made daily in the press, popular and business books, and elsewhere. After this class, you should be able to evaluate these claims critically and think about how they might be tested sociologically.

4. To write well. Social science is, fundamentally, a written art. Writing well is integral to good sociology. Your writing will be evaluated for clarity of thought, language, structure, and grammar.

Readings and Resources

Required Book

Supplementary Readings

All additional readings are available either on the web or on the course website. The course website is available through http://blackboard.jhu.edu.

Other Resources

We will use Poll Everywhere for learning measurement, feedback, and questions during lecture. You can use Poll Everywhere from a computer, phone, or tablet, as you wish. The address for our class is https://PollEv.com/jhusoc.

Have a dictionary close at hand to look up words you don’t know. You can find an adequate one at http://www.dictionary.com if you prefer using an online version.

The Writing Center (https://krieger.jhu.edu/writingcenter/) can help you with writing clearly and correctly.

There is an astonishing amount of information available on the World Wide Web. A significant proportion of that information—though by no means all—is true and relevant. By all means, use the Web to supplement your reading and knowledge, but use it critically and make sure you know the source of the information.

Formal Requirements

You must complete all the course readings. You are responsible for understanding the readings—make use of your fellow students, your dictionary, the Internet, your TA, and your professor to make sure you understand the readings. Course discussion time is to be used for substantive discussion and further exploration of the implications of course readings, not for grasping the basic contents.
You must attend, and participate in, all class discussions and small group exercises. You are also responsible for the information contained in course lectures. While lecture notes will be posted to Blackboard, there is no substitute for attending the lectures.

Assignments

All assignments should be submitted via Blackboard.

Article Notes. On a “Research Discussion” day of your choosing, submit short (less than one page single-spaced) notes on the article or item you read, including a brief description of the core point of the article and questions it raised for you. The notes must be submitted before the beginning of class.

Exams. There will be two examinations: a midterm and a final. You must take the examinations at the date, time, and place assigned. The midterm examination is Wednesday, March 16, 9:00-9:50 am, in 26 Mudd. The final examination will probably be on May 12, 9:00 am – 12:00 noon, but is subject to final scheduling by the Registrar's office.

Topic Development Paper. In this short (approximately 1,000 words) paper, you should decide what topic or question you plan to explore sociologically. The paper should explain the importance of the topic or question and why it makes for a good sociological exploration. You will address this topic or question in your final paper. Due March 3 at midnight.

Final Paper. The final paper is your opportunity to synthesize what you have learned during the class with outside interests and experiences. Your final paper must develop a sociological argument using appropriate sources. It is an academic paper and, as such, must be written in an appropriate style. Your goal is to make progress in answering the question you developed in your Topic Development Paper. There is no specific, set length; however, about 1,500-2,000 words is a good guideline. Due Thursday, April 21, at midnight.

Grading

Your course grade will be calculated as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Item</th>
<th>Points</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Article Notes</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Midterm Exam</td>
<td>15</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Final Exam</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Topic Development Paper</td>

<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Section Research Presentations (2 x 10)</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>

</tbody>
</table>
Adequate completion of the requirements of an assignment will earn you a B−. Work whose quality clearly exceeds these requirements will earn a B, B+, A−, or A. Work whose quality is in one or more ways less than adequate will earn you a grade of C+ or below.

Course Policies

COVID-19. You must follow all Johns Hopkins guidelines and requirements regarding the COVID-19 pandemic. This includes consistent use of an appropriate mask, routine testing, and isolating upon a positive test. Check https://covidinfo.jhu.edu/ for up-to-date policy requirements and information. Zoom links will be provided for the first two weeks of class for students who are unable to attend lecture safely.

You are an adult. As a student in this class, you are provided with a set of resources for learning the class's contents, and you are expected to fulfill a series of requirements designed to evaluate the depth and breadth of your knowledge of those contents. Your grade, therefore, is a reflection of your success in utilizing the resources you have at your disposal. There will be no extra credit or make-up assignments. You are responsible for the information in the readings and given during lectures. If you do not understand something I say in a lecture, ask me during the lecture, during a later class, or privately via e-mail or office hours.

Participation in discussions and class activities is mandatory. Some discussions will be full-class; others will be in small groups. Your participation will be useless—and graded as such—if you have not done the reading.

Assignments are due on the dates listed. In exceptional cases, I may grant an extension; you must discuss this with me in advance. Make sure you give yourself sufficient time to finish assignments by their due dates. You will lose roughly one letter grade per day between the due date and the date the paper is received. You may make the calculation yourself as to whether your work will improve sufficiently in the extra time to make up for the grade reduction.

Lecture topics and readings may change in response to changing current events or new research. Any changes will be announced via email and Blackboard at least one week in advance.

Your participation in this course is covered by the Homewood Undergraduate Academics Policy (https://studentaffairs.jhu.edu/policies-guidelines/undergrad-ethics/). I take academic dishonesty—including, but not limited to, plagiarism—very seriously. There will be no excuses or second chances; if you have plagiarized the ideas or words of someone else without giving credit, you will be referred to the Office of Student Conduct. If you have questions as to what constitutes academic dishonesty, check https://guides.library.jhu.edu/avoidingplagiarism/home or consult a TA or me.
